hexham
book festival

In partnership with Queen's Hall Arts

23rd April – 2nd May 2010

What links books about food, wine, landscape, crime, history, politics and poetry? They're all on offer at the fifth Hexham Book Festival featuring an outstanding line-up of award-winning writers, leading thinkers, controversial speakers and bon viveurs. Join historian and writer Philippa Gregory at Alnwick Castle on murder and betrayal in fifteenth century England; quaff a hundred wines with Guardian columnist Simon Hoggart; discover why writers love landscape with Margaret Drabble; expect wise words from veteran politician Shirley Williams and find a cure for love with poet Wendy Cope.

Get cracking with our Big Festival Read Graham Green's 'Brighton Rock', then join readers and writers after seeing the film at the Forum Cinema. New for 2010, we welcome Val McDermid as Sunday's guest director.

Hexham Book Festival is supported by;

Arts Council England, Catherine Cookson Charitable Trust, Ernest Cook Trust, Greggs Trust, Hadrian Trust, Hexham Courant, Northern Rock Foundation, Northumbria University, Newcastle University, Queen's Hall Arts, Red Marine Ltd, The Community Foundation.

Everyone Welcome

Queen's Hall welcomes visitors with disabilities and aims to ensure that your visit is safe and enjoyable. If you require help, please contact Queen's Hall in advance. Companions of wheelchair users may attend events free of charge. Guide dogs are welcome in all areas of the building.

Main Venue Queen's Hall, Hexham NE46 3LS

5.30pm Emerald Noir: the emergence of contemporary Irish crime fiction

Twenty years ago, the Scots surged to the forefront of international crime fiction with few discernible roots. Now it's the turn of the Irish to take the world by storm. Declan Hughes, Stuart Neville and Alan Glynn are three of the leading proponents of this extraordinary new wave of Hibernian talent. Three things unite them: an unsparing critical eye that sees beyond the surface of social and political life and a willingness to expose uncomfortable truths; vivid and evocative writing; and a genuine talent to entertain. Come along and discover tomorrow's stars today. Chaired by Laura Wilson.

White Room QH NF
£5.00

7.30pm Who Are You? Truth and fiction in forensic science, Val McDermid in conversation with Professor Sue Black

When writers need to discover what's really possible and what might actually happen, they need their own expert witnesses. Tonight, Diamond Dagger award winner Val McDermid talks with the woman she always turns to - Professor Sue Black, Britain's leading forensic anthropologist. Professor Black's commitment to finding answers for bereaved relatives has led to her working on mass graves in Kosovo and Iraq and the Indian Ocean tsunami. Her work with police has revolutionised aspects of identifying criminals. Eavesdrop on a fascinating and entertaining encounter between two women who deal with death in very different ways.

MA Creative Writing

1 year full-time, 2 years part-time

The first Masters degree of its kind in the North East

The MA in Creative Writing provides a stimulating and supportive environment to explore prose writing (short stories and novels) and script writing (writing for stage, radio and screen).

This practical degree is ideal for those who wish to become published, work in the writing industry, or those involved in teaching creative writing.

"I especially liked the one-to-one tutorials and meeting visiting speakers – especially published novelists, agents and editors.

My first novel was accepted by Accent Press and I was awarded the Andrea Badenoch Fiction Prize for my second novel Paper Moon." Marion Husband, Creative Writing MA and award-winning author.
